

ESCAPED PRISONER IS BACK IN SING SING

Warring on All Chauffeurs to Avenge Death of Boy

WEATHER—Fair To-night; Sunday Cloudy; Warmer.

WEATHER—Fair To-night; Sunday Cloudy; Warmer.

FINAL EDITION.

The

World.

FINAL EDITION.

"Circulation Books Open to All."

"Circulation Books Open to All."

PRICE ONE CENT.

Copyright, 1912, by The News Publishing Co. (The New York World).

NEW YORK, SATURDAY, JANUARY 20, 1912.

10 PAGES.

PRICE ONE CENT.

RECKLESS KILLING OF BOY AROUSES NEIGHBORHOOD TO WAGE WAR ON CHAUFFEURS

Police Fear Outbreak Among the Residents of Lower West End Avenue.

HUNTING FOR SLAYER.

Companions of "Buster" Fay, Killed Last Night, Furnish Clues to Detectives.

Since a touring car killed little "Buster" Fay on the street in front of his home, No. 12 West End avenue, yesterday evening and the chauffeur put on speed and got away, automobiles and chauffeurs are about as popular in that part of town as a case of small-pox. The residents of lower West End avenue have sworn to take revenge on any and all automobiles and chauffeurs passing through the street until the man and the car that killed "Buster" Fay are found.

The residents of lower West End avenue are not given to making vain threats. They are not in love with automobiles and chauffeurs anyhow. Chauffeurs bound for uptown on the far west side have been accustomed to running down Fifty-ninth street to West End avenue, turning north and hitting up their speed to 40 or 50 miles an hour to negotiate the hill that leads up from the West End avenue tenements to the West End mansions and apartment houses.

Aroused by the brutality of the killing of the Fay boy, and knowing the temper of the blocks in West End avenue, between Fifty-ninth and Sixty-first streets, the detectives assigned to the case are working like bloodhounds to run down the chauffeur of the car.

OUT OF NUMBERS PROVIDED BY SPECTATORS.

They have a lot of numbers given by spectators who got a fleeting glimpse of the plate hanging from the rear of the automobile. They have a description of the car and another clue in the shape of a rubber stamp, blanketed which was jacked from around the knees of the chauffeur when the car struck "Buster" Fay.

John Lowrie, twelve years old, a playmate of "Buster" Fay and a bright, observing little New Yorker, got the number of the car as 4580. The car bearing this number has been traced to a garage at Little Neck, L. I., where it has been stored all winter. But young Lowrie insists that the figures he furnished are in the number of the car in some combination or other, and "Tom" and David Lawrence, who are witnesses of the fatality, agree with him. The detectives hope to get their car and their man by following all the combinations that can be formed out of the figures given.

The name given "Buster" Fay in baptism was Patrick, after the name of his father. He was called "Buster" because he was fat and good natured. He was ten years old and one of two little boys of the family.

Through the channels of communication peculiar to chauffeurs the word has apparently been passed that block West End avenue is a part of town where automobiles are not welcome at this time. Few cars passed through the street today, and those passed slowly, for a policeman at the corner of Fifty-ninth street manifested extreme vigilance at the approach of an automobile. The policeman was there with orders from superiors who have some respect for the temper of lower West End avenue.

BOY WHOSE DEATH CAUSES A NEW WAR ON AUTO DRIVERS.

PATRICK FAY JR.

ROOSEVELT HUFFY ABOUT GOV. FORT'S STORY OF A VISIT

Refuses to Discuss It, but Explodes a Rumor of a Trip to Europe.

From the demeanor and language of Col. Roosevelt to-day he was not pleased at the action of former Gov. Fort of New Jersey who, after a visit and conference at the Outlook offices yesterday, declared his solemn belief that the Colonel would be willing to accept the Republican nomination and would soon make his position clear. The Colonel was asked this afternoon about the New Jersey statesman's remarks.

"I have nothing to say about what Fort says," snapped the Colonel.

"But Gov. Fort is quoted as saying—" began a reporter.

"I haven't read the Fort interview. I don't intend to read it and I will not discuss it," replied the Colonel, and that was final.

Col. Roosevelt definitely exploded the rumor that he is to sail for Europe in the early spring for a long visit. This report emanated from local sources and was given publicity by a anti-Roosevelt newspaper this morning.

"I haven't thought of going to Europe this summer or any other time," said Col. Roosevelt. "In fact, this is the first time the suggestion has been made in the remotest way in two years. Who is it who so cruelly wishes to exile me now?"

Several hastened to tell him the name of a person they thought would like to exile him, but he refused to listen. He said he intended to go to Oyster Bay on a late afternoon train and had no appointments to meet anybody in the mean time. The Colonel's only visitors at his sanctum were former State Senator Coburn of New Jersey, a Roosevelt booster and a leader of the Progressive movement in his State and former Gov. Horace White of New York. The New Jersey ex-senator is a pretty busy party around the Outlook offices these days, he having been one of the visitors to the Colonel.

Ex-Gov. White was loitered with the Colonel for about two hours. When he was leaving he said he had been talking about a prospective trip to South Africa to shoot big game.

"How is the sentiment toward Taft up onondaga way?" asked a reporter.

"President Taft is very strong up there," said Mr. White. "But, of course, there is some sentiment among the farmers against reciprocity."

Col. Roosevelt's schedule of movements for this afternoon called for his departure for Oyster Bay some time in advance of the time of the arrival of President Taft from New Haven to attend three dinners to-night.

Statecraft reservations and tickets via all Coast, Central, South American and Bermuda open day and night. Tickets, Express money, etc., to be paid at the Post Office by Monday at the latest.

WEST SIDE BLOCK IN TERROR FROM GAS EXPLOSION

Big Pieces of Asphalt Hurlled Through Windows and on Roofs of Private Residences

FLAME MANY FEET HIGH.

Police Guarding It Until Workmen Can Repair the Damaged Main.

There was a volcanic-like eruption of fire and rock in the middle of Eighty-ninth street, between Columbus avenue and Central Park West to-day when a gas main exploded. It shook the neighborhood, breaking windows and creating a panic in scores of the fine dwelling houses on both sides of the street. Pieces of asphalt were hurled through parlor and second-story windows. Big blocks of it went sixty feet in the air and fell upon the roofs.

Men, women and children, screaming with fear, ran out into the street and then rushed back for shelter again as a second explosion shook the block. All escaped unhurt.

After the first shock a gas flame thirty feet high geysered from the cavern in the middle of the street. It burned with a roar that could be heard a block away, and it will continue to burn until the gas main which burst can be stopped.

A fire alarm was turned in, and Deputy Chief King came with apparatus. He remained in charge, establishing fire lines about the fountain of fire. A dozen policemen were detailed to maintain the fire lines.

When the emergency crew from the gas company arrived they immediately turned off the gas in every building on both sides of the street. Then laborers were put to work mining for the broken main on both sides. They worked amid puffs of explosions of gas, which had worked its way through the ground for fifty feet on both sides of the hole. No one could explain what caused the break in the main.

Man Falsely Imprisoned, Freed After Year, His Wife and Sister

MR. & MRS. OSCAR KRUEGER

TAFT RUNS TO FIRE IN YALE'S HISTORIC OLD SOUTH MIDDLE

President Cuts Chapel to See Firemen Fight Blaze That Damages Dormitory.

DYNAMITE FIND IN MILL STRIKE; SEVEN ARRESTED

Two Women Among Prisoners Taken From House Where Explosive Was Hidden.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Jan. 20.—The first arrests growing out of the investigation of possible use of dynamite in connection with the mill strike in this city was made this afternoon when six Syrians and a negro were taken into custody in a house where several sticks of dynamite with caps, fuses and wires were found. The arrests were made by four members of the State police who have been searching for such explosives for several days. How they happened to find the dynamite was a matter which they kept secret.

Those under arrest are, Sarah Marad, a tailor in whose room the dynamite was found, and who is one of the strike leaders, Joseph Assad, Trinidad Boston, colored; David Hoshed, David Barbara of Philadelphia, N. Y.; Miss Zekia Ransell and Miss Mary Switz.

The authorities learned that dynamite had been brought into the city last night from Pennsylvania and today two forces of officers started out to find it. One party went to the Italian quarter while the other searched houses occupied by Syrians.

Upon reaching the Marad house the officers met no resistance and were arrested when the dynamite was found in a closet behind a curtain. The explosives were immediately sent to Police Headquarters and arrangements made for an early hearing in court.

Previous to the arrests Col. Stevenson, in command of the militia, surrounded all the dynamite that the police and soldiers could find in Lawrence and had it conveyed to the armory.

Fewer convicts returned to work today and the outlook became less encouraging when it was announced that the mills would probably be shut down Monday morning. There was no response today to the appeal of President Wood of the American Woolen company to his 10,000 striking employees to return to work. It is possible, however, that at the meeting of the strikers tomorrow some concerted action may be taken regarding the offer.

Four additional companies of troops were today added to the double force guarding the city.

ROBBED OF YEAR OF HIS LIBERTY, WANTS TO FORGET

Oscar Krueger, Vindicated and Freed from Prison, Returns to Loyal Wife.

BLAMES MR. COMSTOCK.

Was Unjustly Convicted of Sending Improper Mail—Now Seeks Only Peace.

Oscar Krueger is the happiest man in New York to-day. Happy, too, are his loyal wife and their little son Harold, who, with Mrs. Elsie Reynolds, Krueger's sister, waited up in their cozy little home all night for Krueger's return from the Federal prison in Atlanta where he has been wrongly imprisoned for a year.

Krueger was released from prison on the order of President Taft when an investigation of the case by Assistant District Attorney Daniel Walton Jr., acting under instructions from the Department of Justice, disclosed Krueger had been unjustly convicted of sending a young woman an improper letter through the mail.

The evidence in the case was secured by Anthony Comstock and, after Krueger had been convicted and sentenced to eighteen months imprisonment, it was discovered he was not the man who had mailed the letter. A strong chain of circumstantial evidence secured his conviction, in a remarkable case, by a jury which scarcely left the jury box, so sure were they Krueger was the guilty man.

When an Evening World reporter called at the Krueger home, No. 212 East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, to-day, he found the happy husband had arrived after his long night ride from Atlanta. The reunited family were just finishing the breakfast breakfast they ever had eaten.

The evidence in the case was secured by Anthony Comstock and, after Krueger had been convicted and sentenced to eighteen months imprisonment, it was discovered he was not the man who had mailed the letter. A strong chain of circumstantial evidence secured his conviction, in a remarkable case, by a jury which scarcely left the jury box, so sure were they Krueger was the guilty man.

When an Evening World reporter called at the Krueger home, No. 212 East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, to-day, he found the happy husband had arrived after his long night ride from Atlanta. The reunited family were just finishing the breakfast breakfast they ever had eaten.

CONVICT CAPTURED AFTER CUTTING HIS WAY FROM SING SING

Short Termers Chips Hole in Thick Roof, Wriggles Through Opening and Lowers Self to Freedom by Blanket Rope.

MOST REMARKABLE ESCAPE IN HISTORY OF THE PRISON.

Caught Few Hours Later Waiting for Train at Briarcliffe and Returned to "Solitary."

Francesco Doliano, a short-term convict at Sing Sing, enjoyed a few hours' liberty to-day after the most remarkable escape in the history of the prison. In some manner the prisoner had chipped and scraped an opening in the foot-thick stone roof large enough to haul himself through. A rope of twisted blankets let him to the ground.

Doliano's escape was discovered when keepers went through the main prison early to-day. An alarm was immediately sent out to the whole countryside and a few hours later the man was captured at Briarcliffe.

Chief of Police Cator saw a man hanging about the railroad tracks of the Putnam Division and because of his suspicious actions took him into custody. He turned out to be Doliano. He was returned to Sing Sing and is now in solitary confinement.

How long Doliano had labored to make the hole in the prison roof large enough to accommodate his shoulders can only be surmised. It is believed he must have begun scraping away at the hard stone for a week at least, or possibly a month. He could work only in the dead of night, when his fellow prisoners were sound asleep, and even then his working must have proceeded slowly in the fear that a keeper might be attracted by the scraping steel.

Each cell in the top gallery has a ventilator, six by eight inches, set in the masonry roof that slants down slanting over the heads of prisoners. By standing on his stool or cot Doliano, a little man, was within reach of the ventilator.

With his home-made stone-cutting implement the determined prisoner must have begun his task by cutting away the stone around the metal ventilator. It is believed the first part of his job was accomplished by freeing entirely the ventilator, so he could take it down at night when he resumed operations and replace it during the day in such a manner that the steady enlargement of the hole in the roof was not noticeable during the busy inspections made by keepers.

DEAD MAN IN SNOW MAY BE VICTIM OF REVOLVER DUEL

Bloodstains Show Two Persons Had Been at Place Where Body Was Found.

William and Henry O'Neill, walking this afternoon through the woods at the Maplewood end of the South Orange (N. J.) trolley line, came upon the body of a man lying in the snow. There was a bullet wound in his head. No revolver was near.

The police on investigation found there had been two men at the spot, and that one of them had gone away, leaving a trail of blood on the snow.

Neighbors said they had heard several shots in the woods early in the afternoon which they thought were fired by hunters. One or two of them remembered having seen a man come out of the woods and limp toward the end of the trolley line.

The dead man was apparently thirty-five years old, wore a gray storm cap, black overcoat, black coat and light trousers. There were no indications regarding his identity.

The police came to the conclusion that two men came here from New York City for a duel. One of the men, M. Herbert Simmons said that the man left dead in the woods could not possibly have committed suicide.

THIRD BOSTON FIRE VICTIM.

HOBSON, Jan. 20.—A second body, that of a woman, was found to-day in the ruins of the Revere House, which was partially destroyed by fire on Tuesday. The body of another woman was recovered yesterday. Both were at the Morgue for identification. As a fireman died as the result of injuries sustained at the fire, the fatalities today reached three and the police and firemen were not sure this afternoon that all the bodies have been recovered.

It was the most remarkable exploit I have encountered in my experience," said Warden John S. Kennedy over the phone to The Evening World to-day. Doliano was sentenced in Nov., 1910, to not less than two and a half nor more than five years for felonious assault. He had been a model prisoner and in all likelihood would have been paroled a year from next May.

He was employed in the cart and wagon shop in the prison, and it is thought he may have smuggled some implement into his cell.

SUNDAY WORLD'S CARDINAL FARLEY PORTRAIT

So many applications for copies of this famous portrait came from people who failed to secure the FREE coupon printed in last Sunday's World (and pictures could not be obtained otherwise) that it has been decided to put the picture within reach of Sunday World readers again. For further particulars see Tomorrow's Sunday World. First page. Main Sheet.

N. B.—All who want last week's free coupon and have not yet received the picture are requested to call on the quantity called for by Sunday World readers to be in the Post Office by Monday at the latest.

Wilson on Nebraska Bailout. LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 20.—The name of Gov. Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey was presented as a candidate for President at the Democratic primary by a petition filed with the Secretary of State here today. The petition is signed by Omaha men.

As wires are down and details meagre it is feared the death list may grow.